ASNM NEWS

A Message from President CJ (Carolyn) Johnson

I'm looking forward to welcoming everyone to the 2014 Annual meeting in Silver City. This year's meeting promises to be interesting, educational, and fun. Wouldn't it be wonderful if all our Affiliate Societies were represented! During the business meeting on Saturday I will be calling on each organization to briefly report to the membership about their activities over the past year, and I am asking that those attending select a representative to do so. We also ask you to provide a hard copy of your report to La Jornada Editor Helen Crotty for inclusion in the summer newsletter. I'm hoping to see lots of familiar faces and even more new faces. ASNM and Silver City – what more could you ask?

Still Time to Register for the ASNM Annual Meeting in Silver City April 11-13

Bill Hudson, Chair of Silver City's Annual Meeting announces that registration and field trip signups will begin at 4 pm in the newly renovated historic Murray Hotel, followed by a "meet and greet" time from 5-7 pm. There will be no formal Friday evening program, and attendees are encouraged to seek out one of the fine local restaurants for dinner (reservations advised). There will be a full program of papers on Saturday, most of them related to theme "Mimbres Connections—Then and Now" The business meeting is scheduled right after lunch [Please see Candidates Biographies, the Financial Report for 2013, and the Proposed Budget on pages 4 to 6 and vote the ballot on page 7]. More papers follow the business meeting, and then—after a short break—a social hour and the Awards Banquet. Barbara Roth, Chair of the Anthropology Department at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas will be the Bandelier Lecturer, speaking on "Life in a Mimbres Pithouse Village—A.D. 500 to 1000." Dr. Roth has excavated several sites in the Mimbres Valley and most recently concluded a multi-season excavation of the Harris Site. Field trips on offer are to Gila Cliff Dwellings, the Woodrow Ruin, the Elk Ridge and Upper Mimbres sites, the Pony Hills rock art site, and to the Nan Ruin exhibit at Western New Mexico University Museum. Group size is limited for all the field trips, and signups begin at 4 pm Friday. A registration form is attached (page 9). Highlights from the February Meeting of the Trustees

Executive Secretary: Dolores Sundt reported a total of 9 Affiliate, 28 Institutional, and 244 individual, family, and honorary memberships for a total of 281 members in 2013.

Treasurer: Anna Walters distributed copies of the 2013 year-end report and her proposed budget for 2014 [attached]. The proposed budget was approved by the Trustees for a vote by the membership at the Annual Meeting.

Committee Reports

Internal Financial Review: John Hayden, Patricia Wing, and George Ruebelmann reviewed the books for 2013 and found them in good order.

Certification Council: Roger Moore reported that nine people qualified and willing to teach archaeological seminars are currently listed on the Council database. More teachers are needed, and interested people are invited to submit a résumé. More copies of the certification brochure are being printed.

Richard A. Bice Award for Archaeological Achievement: Bill Simms provided a slate of candidates nominated by the Affiliate Societies. The Trustees selected two candidates for the 2014 award.

Nominations: Charlie Barnes presented a slate of six candidates for the four openings on the Board of Trustees. Of the four Trustees whose terms expire in 2014, two—Carol Condie and Gary Hein—are retiring; CJ Johnson and Patricia Wing will run for re-election. Four candidates new to the Board were nominated by various Affiliates. They are Janet Mackenzie of the Mesa Prieta Project, Matt Barbour of Jemez Historic Site, and Sally McLaughlin and John Guth of the Albuquerque Archaeological Society. The Trustees approved the slate.

Annual Volume Honoree: Hayward Franklin presented nominations of several candidates to the Trustees by email, and John Hayden was selected at the meeting to be the 2015 Honoree.

Special Publications: Emily Brown reported for David Kirkpatrick that the long-awaited Mera publication is in the final stages and will be ready for sale at the Annual Meeting.

Scholarship: Greg Sagemiller announced that to address rising costs, students may now apply for scholarships in excess of the previous amounts of $100-$500 normally awarded. Brochures have been sent to New Mexico universities with degree programs in anthropology and related disciplines, and information and applications forms are posted on the website.

Rock Art Council: Carol Chamberland announced that Richard Ford has agreed to fill the vacancy in the office of Council Vice President. A new group from the Torrance County Archaeological Society has joined the Council and is working the Diablo site. John Guth, Council Secretary, and two others are volunteering with Anna Naruta Moya at ARMS to process the huge backlog of recorded rock art data housed there. John, Carol, and Gary Hein, with input from Anna Naruta Moya, have developed an official standard for report filing at ARMS that is now on the RAC website.

Greg Sagemiller Resigns as ASNM Elected Trustee

After 21 years as an elected Trustee, some of them as ASNM president and most of them as Chair of the Scholarship Committee, Greg Sagemiller has resigned to devote more time to his new career as a writer. Greg was instrumental in the re-establishment of the ASNM scholarships and has given countless hours to developing and implementing the scholarship program, which over the past 19 award years has granted 74 awards to 67 recipients, totaling $37,815. He has continued to supervise the 2014 Scholarship awards, but his resignation, effective at the close of the Annual Meeting, leaves a fifth Trustee position open and a very important Chairmanship to be filled.

LONG-AWAITED MERA VOLUME TO BE AVAILABLE AT THE ANNUAL MEETING

Since Mera: The Original Eleven Bulletins with Essays and Opinions Derived from Recent Research, compiled and edited by Emily J. Brown, Regge N. Wiseman, and Rory P. Gauthier, with contributions by Hayward H. Franklin and Theodore R. Frisbie, will be available for sale ($40) at the Annual Meeting in Silver City or by mail for $40 plus $5 shipping and handling (order form on ASNM website).

This 400-page book contains high quality and accurate reproductions of the entire original 11 Laboratory of Anthropology Technical Bulletins by H. P. Mera and his colleagues in the form of scanned versions of every page, plate, and oversized chart and map.

Each Bulletin is prefaced by an introduction by a scholar in the field, addressing the state of current research on its subject. The book also contains a biography of H. P. Mera by Theodore Frisbie, a bibliography of Mera's publications, and a preface describing Mera's accomplishments and his place in the field of Southwestern archaeology by Hayward Franklin.

The original Bulletins have become scarce in recent years and, while still widely cited by scholars, few researchers have access to them, even as faded Xerox copies, much less the chance to own one. This reproduction utilizes scanned versions of the original pages so that the bulletins can be viewed and cited as they were printed while making them much more widely available and affordable by the general public. The introductions put the original research in perspective, identifying where new information has come to light and recognizing where Mera's ideas have stood the test of time.

NEWS AND NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE

Major Pre-Hohokam Site Found in Arizona. A major pre-Hohokam settlement with 37 pit houses, an irrigation canal, 6 burials, and features outside of the main area have been uncovered by construction in Marana, Arizona. The site is dated at 2,500-1,500 BCE. More burial finds are expected. Later Hohokam-era remains are at the surface of the site. The possible canal is dated to 1000 BCE-1 CE. Many other sites have been found in this area near the Santa Cruz River. There will be an ongoing battle as to how long archaeologists can work on the site before modern development buries it. The site study will help in determining the earliest agricultural techniques in the Southwest. See the Arizona Daily Star <http://bit.ly/1hWkH73>. [From Mike Ruggeri's Ancient Southwest Magazine]

Candidates for Trustee 2014 (Vote for five)

Matthew J. Barbour holds BA (2002) and MA (2010) degrees in Anthropology from the University of New Mexico and has worked for the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs since 2002. Most of this time has been spent with the Office of Archaeological Studies, where he headed a number of large-scale archaeological excavation and survey projects throughout New Mexico but mostly in and around the cities of Deming and Santa Fe. Currently he is the Manager of Jemez Historic Site (Giusewa Pueblo/San Jose de los Jemez Mission) in Jemez Springs. Matt's research interests are varied, ranging from the impacts of colonialism on indigenous populations to urban expansion during the Prohibition and Depression Eras. He has published more than 100 nonfiction articles and monographs on the archaeology and history of the American Southwest and is a regular contributor to the Red Rocks Reporter (Jemez Pueblo Newsletter) and Sandoval Signpost. In 2012, he was awarded the City of Santa Fe Heritage Preservation Award for Excellence in Archaeology. Matt has been ASNM member since 2006 and served as Program Chair for the Annual Meeting in Santa Fe in 2010.

John Guth is a systems engineer and management consultant with a long interest in New Mexico history, geology, and archaeology. He is an active participant in the Albuquerque Archaeological Society, currently serving as Treasurer, and ASNM's Rock Art Council, serving as Secretary. He participated, as a team member and then leader, in the three-year San Pedro Creek, Sandoval County, rock art recording project, learning from experienced AAS members. Currently he is a volunteer at the Laboratory of Anthropology in Santa Fe, focusing on archiving rock art reports, many resulting from recording projects by ASNM affiliates. He helped to develop archival-ready guidelines for rock art reports that is enabling prompt filing and availability for research of new submissions to the New Mexico Archaeological Records Management Section (ARMS). John is also a Board member with the Mesa Prieta Petroglyph Project.

Carolyn J. (CJ) Johnson holds a BS degree in Geography from California State University, Hayward, but admits to never having used her degree in an official, professional endeavor. She retired in 2001 after 35 years in the telecommunications and financial services industries as a software specialist. CJ became an active member of the Taos Archaeological Society in 2003, just months after moving to Taos from California. She developed a website for TAS and served as president 2007-2011. During her presidency, TAS's role in community outreach programs greatly expanded. She oversaw coordinated efforts of several very active committees. In 2008, after attending the first New Mexico SiteWatch training class offered in Taos, she agreed to be the Taos/North Central New Mexico SiteWatch coordinator. CJ has participated in rock art recording projects at Mesa Prieta and numerous Taos area sites. She has also volunteered at the Ghost Ranch rock shelter archaeological excavations. In 2011 CJ joined the ASNM Board of Trustees and in 2013 was elected President.

Janet MacKenzie is an archaeologist who has done excavation and survey in Britain, Canada, and Peru since 1972, with particular emphasis on fortified sites associated with a walled trade route on the continental divide in the northern sierra of Peru. She has conducted research and writing for exhibit creation at the Saskatchewan Western Development Museum. At first a volunteer with the Mesa Prieta Petroglyph Project in northern New Mexico, she became Project Coordinator in 2010 and oversees MPPP's archaeological recording and award-winning Summer Youth Intern and Fourth Grade Curriculum programs, docent-led tours of the Wells Petroglyph Preserve, and other MPPP activities in the community. Janet is a past volunteer with the ASNM Rock Art Council, the Northern Rio Grande National Heritage Area, and New Mexico SiteWatch Program. She volunteers at the Archaeological Records Management Section of the New Mexico Historic Preservation Office and MPPP. She is a member of the ASNM, the New Mexico Association of Museums, and the Albuquerque Archaeological Society. Since last September she has served as Secretary pro tem at meetings of the ASNM Board of Trustees.

Sally McLaughlin became interested in Archaeology in the late 1990s while living in Farmington and took a few classes at San Juan College and a field school at the Bolack Ranch under Linda Wheelbarger. She attended Rock Art Recording School in Arizona for three years, helping with record-keeping the last year. After moving to Albuquerque 2001, she became active in the Albuquerque Archaeological Society and served as Secretary for one year and is currently "greeter" for monthly meetings. As a member of the Certification Council of ASNM, she co-developed the certification recruiting brochure. She has just returned from a two week archaeological dig in Jordan at the Tell al Hammam, an Early, Mid and Late Bronze age site in Madaba. (Proposed site of Sodom of Biblical mention). She is interested in promoting archaeological preservation in the Southwest and other areas of the world.

Patricia Wing holds BA degree in Economics/English from the University of Arizona and an MA degree in Anthropology from Arizona State University. On completing her Master's she expected to work in field of anthropology but instead found employment at the Arizona state capitol in the Governor's Office and also served as assistant director of the Arizona Solar Energy Commission. Subsequently, she worked as a science and technical writer/editor at Los Alamos National Laboratory for 14 years. Over the past two years, she has assisted ASNM by proofreading and doing the mailings for the newsletter. She has also worked on editing papers for the annual volume under the direction of one of the senior editors. Currently, she is doing some information-gathering for the Scholarship Committee.
